

Diary – Wednesday, June 16

Mini story: How to Send Invitations by Julia and Maya

I will invite you to my birthday party. It's February 24th.

And I will invite you to my birthday party.

I have lots of work to do on my invitation. You have to fold your card. Then you have to lick your envelope. Then I'll write my name on the back of my envelope and the front. This is how I write my name: This is a 'J'. This is a 'u'. This is a 'l'. This is a 'i', and this is a 'a'. I'll put it right next to my best buddy.

Envelopes, an official-looking stamper and classroom mailboxes speak to the children. In response the children bring with them their loving friendships and rich experiences and knowledge which they apply to the highly-valued occupation of birthday invitations. There are many steps to writing and sending a letter, and four-year-olds Julia and Maya follow them diligently as Julia explains the procedure step by step.