

If you do that/eat that, you could die

This conversation has come up a number of times. It came up first at school during our first explorations with playdough at school. The girls told the boys, if you eat that, you could die. We talked about what the playdough was made of: all things you could eat. After hearing that they wouldn't die from the playdough, Julia tried it too.